

March 27, 2020

All Atlantic:

Hope everyone is safe and secure wherever you may be today. We continue to be in absolute AWE of the effort given, the individual commitment each of you has to Atlantic and, most importantly, to the essential supply chain of critical goods for our nation. We speak a lot about culture at Atlantic, but in moments of great intensity, that culture is tested, and a spotlight is shown on us, individually, and as a collective.

Atlantic is shining back with great luminosity. In the last several weeks, Atlantic has been the very best of itself. You have each been the very best of you. And it shows. It shows to your fellow employees, your leadership, our suppliers, our customers and most importantly the greater supply chain. We are survivors. We are THE leader in our industry.

The fight against COVID-19 is not over, far from it. We will continue to be challenged and will be asked to respond quickly with flexibility and grit. And we will. You have proven that.

As we push to the close of another week under threat of this pandemic, take a moment to pause and reflect. Honor your efforts and be proud of the organization that you create every day. As we move into the weekend, enjoy your family. Enjoy laughter, good food, fresh air, sunlight and all the other simple pleasure we so often take for granted. Let's use this time to get back to the basics. Take some time to breathe. You have certainly earned it.

Atlantic is in very good hands, because they are your hands. Thanks to all. Keep up the amazing work. I commend each and every one of you. Here's to new beginnings.

Wes Carter